Women Write the War: The Voices of Women Behind Operation Iraqi Freedom Bee Pedersen

"Women Write the War, The Voices Behind Operation Iraqi Freedom" is a poignant anthology by the mothers, wives, sisters and sweethearts who have experienced the agony of sending their loved ones off to war. They wait, with nervous anticipation for the unexpected knock at the door or a startling late night phone call telling them their son or daughter has been wounded or killed in action. The author, Bee Pedersen, and the mother of a Soldier serving in Iraq in the war against global terrorism, has experienced such heartache firsthand. Determined to tell the public the other side of war and how women cope with the fear and loneliness of a son or a daughter or a lover living in mortal danger, she has collected the very best of dozens of the touching personal stories from these gallant women.

With more than 50 women authors, 70 photos from the battlefield and at home, and 20 news reports from nationally recognized news bureaus, "Women Write the War" is a book that will inspire anyone who has even the slightest reflection or thought about this current war. It is a treasure; a remarkable work that allows the "women behind the Soldier" to tell their story, and, they are not afraid to tell it like it is. "Women Write the War" is a major contribution toward understanding the war in Iraq, and the men and women who fight it. Bee Pedersen has given us a work of awesome proportions.
