The UnDanish Revolution II is a deeper account of the physical reality which upsets and frustrates myriad of individuals on a daily basis in Danish society. The system of man in Denmark which is dominated by the jungle law is revealed in this book extensively. The secrets of the negative consciousness and the dark world expand the readers mind until a point of realization of the truth. In a society which is at war within itself as a result of avarice, power, and pride the individual is subjected to mental slavery and to a mass brainwash to worship the jungle law. The mental survival in a land whence a human being is perceived as a foe by the collective and by its social leaders, non conformity becomes the ultimate test of faith. In a land deprived of love, whereas hatred towards life is promoted, it is unfortunate that youth finds refuge in suicides. In a land where life has no value and where carpe diem is the hunted, only the mundane survives. The Jungle Law hiding behind the Jante law is equal to a wolf hiding behind sheep clothing. The drastic classification to social statuses is the cause for a nightmarish society in which the weak is the enemy whereas the strong is the socially accepted and the oppressor. However, rich and poor, young and old, foreign or local, are all subjected to the madness of the jungle law. In this book the mystery of the myriad suicides becomes clearer to the readers whom ever wondered why Denmark has been titled 'The most depressive country on in the world'. Furthermore, the growing crime, the inevitable diseases, and the general cloud of oppression are all associated with the conventions and with the constitutions of the Jante/Jungle Law. The systematic and intensive mass destruction of the human spirit is a result of a rebellion against moral virtue. This book subtly demonstrates that Danish society is indeed the center of hell in regard to social life and human consciousness. The false pretense of the brainwashed masses has become a pragmatic solution in order to survive the physical reality of the jungle law. The author, whom is a stranger in a strange land, feels as a redeemer whom was sent out to save the children of the future from the claws and jaws of the jungle law. He feels strongly that he was born stop the madness of the jungle law, to subvert it, to usurp power, and replace it with justice. The author's assignment was to restore human rights and to proclaim the realm of salvation. As a spiritual leader he wrote this book in order to create awareness and realization which will finally lead to resistance and to a revolution against the jungle law. Danish society has become the challenge of the author as it is the heart of the jungle law, socially, politically, but mostly spiritually. In a land where a man is so deeply oppressed and depressed it appears that the loss of sanity and the loss of life become not only the refuge, but also the dogmas and norms. The uncivilized, the broken spirited, the unintelligent, and the lost, are all being socially accepted/promoted due to the Jante Law propaganda/order. The moralist, the different, the intelligent, and the civilized are all being classified as the enemy together with the weak in society. Spiritual death is promoted over carpe diem. Madness is promoted over reason. Crime is promoted over morality. Nevertheless, the testimonies of dozens of thousands of afflicted individuals in Denmark are now being revived owing to this courageous book of revolution. The truth has bounced and resurfaced. According to this book the time has come to rebel against the Jungle/Jante Law, thereupon to open the gates for love, peace, and harmony. Divine Law is at hand.
