This historical work offers an alternative interpretation for how Colombia lost Panama in 1903. It argues that the concession of Panama was first initiated in 1788, when Thomas Jefferson decided that the construction of a canal through the isthmus of Panama was imperative in accordance with the principles of the manifest destiny. Information about the the first designs for the construction of the canal is included.

Esta obra historica plantea una interpretacion alternativa de como Colombia perdió Panama. El argumento central sostiene que la pérdida se venía cocinando desde 1788, cuando Thomas Jefferson estableció como imperativa la construcción de un canal a través del istmo de Panamá como parte de la máxima del Destino Manifiesto. También incluye informacion sbore las primeros proyectos de la construcción del canal.
